1953 BANDINI 750 SILURO SPORT

HISTORY

Italian vehicle manufacturer, Bandini, was founded in 1946 by Ilario Bandini in Forlì, Italy.

His vehicles focused on aviation-grade tubular steel chassis' and hammered formed aluminium bodies with Fiat-powered engines.

Following World War II there was a need to provide a platform for a new generation of drivers to compete. Race cars introduced into this series were light, nimble and simple.

This particular Bandini 750 Sport Siluro was owned by George L. Sterner, a famous sports car collector and appeared in “A history of Sports Cars” published in 1970 by G.N. Georgano.

In 1953 it raced in Mille Miglia with drivers Neri and Ravioli. It also has the honourable mention of being race by Wayne Chapman at Columbia airport in 1957.

Later in its life it was imported into Japan and issued its FIVA identity card in September 2004 where it joined the Japanese Mille Miglia and La Festa Mille Miglia.

In 2005 to 2007 the vehicle was completely restored and thereafter entered into a number of different Japanese rallies such as Rally Nippon and La Festa Mille Miglia.
